THE GREATEST

By Jim Gumm Owner / Editor of THE BLITZ

College football is celebrating its 150th season in 2019 and THE BLITZ has decided to come up with four different lists. We're listing the 50 greatest college football players, 80 greatest college football rivalries, 150 greatest college football teams and the 35 greatest college football coaches.

Before we get too deep into this, I want to acknowledge that NOBODY will agree with any list I have because this is MY opinion. We're talking about players, rivalries, teams, and coaches from 150 years. Obviously, I wasn't around for the first 90 years so my lists are going to be influenced by what I saw in my lifetime. That being said, as a college football historian, I will include players, teams and coaches that I never saw but based on the research that I've done, I can rank them regardless.

As someone who was raised on Major League Baseball and who still loves the MLB, I can say, with certainty, that (other than Major League Baseball) no sport has a history as rich as college football but it's the passion and pageantry of college football that I love so much and puts it at the top. Ironically both professional baseball and college football began in 1869. and are celebrating 150 years in 2019.

As I grew out of my teens, I began to follow the NFL and college football equally and they both surpassed Major League Baseball. However, college football became more and more intriguing after the NFL had two separate strikes and franchises were shifting from city-to-city. One thing that college football fans don't have to worry about is our favorite university pulling up stakes and moving to another state or city.

The fact that there are so many schools and so many loyal fan bases has always been special. Also, the joy of a schools' success radiates through the fans and alumni. Don't let anyone convince you that the joy that a North Dakota State fan has about the Bison is less than the fans of Clemson or Alabama just because they play Division I FCS instead of Division I FBS. Those fans live for Saturdays just as much as the fans in Tuscaloosa, Columbus, Norman, Lincoln and Knoxville.

50 GREATEST COLLEGE FOOTBALL PLAYERS

Below and on page 2 we list the 50 greatest college football players. In my opinion Barry Sanders is far and away the single greatest college football player that I ever saw and it's not even close. No player was as dominating as he was during his 1988 Heisman Trophy winning season. In this day of the quarterback being the most hyped and desirable player, you'll notice that I have 5 of the top 6 players that were running backs. To me there is nothing that is more deflating to a defense than not being able to stop the run. Everything is moving forward. The offensive line is plowing ahead as opposed to dropping backwards in pass protection and that's why I am heavy towards running back at the top of my list.

80 GREATEST COLLEGE FOOTBALL RIVALRIES

Below and we rank the Top 80 college football rivalries at the Division I FBS level. Before you glance through it, we already know, that you will disagree because a fan of any school listed below the top 5 will think that this list is garbage. Our goal was to find which rivalry is followed nationally and then regionally. We have the Army-Navy game ranked #1. We understand that this game does not have national implications when it's played but, come one, it's the United States Military Academy vs the United States Naval Academy and with out those, the United States isn't the country that it is, so that has a little bearing on our rankings. The hardest part was the #2 rivalry. Ohio State-Michigan and Alabama-Auburn are both great rivalries but the fact that Ohio State-Michigan is the most played series between schools that were ranked at the time the game was played and the fact that Ohio State and Michigan are the two winningest programs in Big Ten history helps elevate that rivalry to #2. Oklahoma-Texas and Notre Dame-USC round out the Top 5.
